Slaying of Baby Face Nelson Called Justifiable Homicide By Members of Coroner's Jury

INTERNATIONAL LIVESTOCK SHOW TO OPEN TODAY

Officials Amazed By High Quality Of Exhibits

By Harold K. Mills.
Associated Press Staff Writer.
Chicago, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Agriculture's greatest spectacle awaited its curtain call tonight with drought and crop reduction missing from its dramatic personnel.

Effects of last season's drought, the worst in 40 years, and of governmental restrictions were not apparent in the quality of livestock and grains assembled at the Chicago stockyards for the 35th annual International Livestock Exposition which opens tomorrow.

B. H. Heide, veteran manager of the exposition, and his directors were delighted tonight after a preview of the exhibits which filled the $1,250,000 amphitheater erected this summer to replace the old building destroyed in the stockyards fire of last May.

"We were amazed by the high quality of the grain exhibits and by the appearance of the cattle after the drought of last summer," Heide said. "The show has never seen such uniformly high class animals as have been shipped this year. The specimens are simply marvelous in view of the difficulties farmers experienced. They represent a degree of quality never reached before in the 35 years of the exposition."

"All grain samples are up to the standards set in previous shows. Interest in agriculture apparently has set a new mark also. We anticipate the largest crowds in history and the number of exhibits now establishes a new mark."

One result of the drought may be seen at the exposition, leaders said. Certain sections of the country including the southwest and parts of the northwest, where rain during the growing season was scant, have not contributed their usual number of entries. Major awards may go as a result to more fortunate growers from the south, the central west and from Canada.

Heide said about 12,500 prize cattle and almost 5,000 grain entries had been checked in tonight.

As a curtain raiser to the events to begin tomorrow, 54 youths from 18 states competed today in a junior livestock judging contest. The three winners will be awarded agricultural school scholarships by the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Adding a royal touch to the exposition was the entry of his royal highness, the Prince of Wales. From his famous E. P. ranch at High River, Ontario, Can., several head of prize winning cattle were sent to Chicago. The royal entries were given special quarters near the north wing entrance of the new amphitheater where they early attracted much attention among officials and exhibitors.

Following the official opening of the exposition tomorrow "Chicago Night" will be celebrated tomorrow night with a series of events open only to Chicago entrants. There will be a formal dedication program for the new amphitheater which rose from the twisted ruins left a few months ago by Chicago's second great fire.

Only a few finishing touches were required today for the huge structure, erected to seat 8,000 people around the big show arena.

WEATHER

For Jacksonville and vicinity—After providing this territory with cloudy and cold weather today, the weather will probably send showers and warmer weather on Sunday.

The U. S. Cooperative Weather Bureau at the Nyrbury Sanitarium last night gave temperatures for the past 24 hours as: high 88; current 34 and low 34. Barometer readings were: A. M. 29.35; P. M. 29.64. Rainfall .37 of an inch.

Illinois: Mostly cloudy, somewhat colder in extreme northeast Saturday; Sunday probably showers, warmer.

Indiana: Mostly cloudy, colder Saturday; Sunday probably rain, warmer.

Wisconsin: Snow, colder in extreme east Saturday; Sunday snow or rain, somewhat warmer.

Missouri: Mostly cloudy Saturday, probably rain Sunday; rising temperature.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The slaying of George (Baby Face) Nelson, the killer, was written into the books as a justifiable homicide today by a coroner's jury which found that he had died in battle with two federal agents who gave their lives to the tradition of "always getting their man."

The same inquest disclosed that the terrorist's practical wife, Helen Gillis, had several months ago picked out the body of her gangster husband when he met the inevitable death at the hands of the law he defied.

The jurors decided Nelson died of wounds in the abdomen inflicted by either or both government agents Samuel P. Cowley and Herman E. Hollis. Both federal agents were fatally wounded in the affray last Tuesday in suburban Barrington.

The formality of the inquest disposed of, federal agents concentrated on a search of Nelson's widow, believed to have been with the Dillinger henchman when he was slain, and the unnamed gunman who made up the trio.

Will Release Couple
Two persons whose seizure yesterday at the Union bus station here led to a report that Nelson's widow and John Hamilton, sole survivor of the major Dillinger lieutenants, had been captured were slated for release. They were Chester Gibson, 21, of Loveland, Okla., and Mrs. Opal Cason, 24. Police said there was no evidence against them.

After the inquest Nelson's body was removed to the undertaking establishment of Philip Sadowski.

Mrs. Juliette Fitzsimmons, sister of the slain desperado, told the jury that Helen Gillis several months ago had informed her that if anything "happened to Lester (Nelson's real name was Lester Gillis)," she wanted under-saker Sadowski, the family mortician, to be called. She said she had not seen her brother since he began a sentence in Joliet penitentiary several years ago.

She called Sadowski, she said, to pick up Nelson's body from a ditch near suburban Niles Center after she had heard a radio report of his death. Sadowski, however, said that his call to pick up the body had come from a male voice over the telephone early Wednesday morning. That call was believed to have been made by Nelson's male companion.

Chief of police A. C. Stoenberg of Niles Center said he believed some one had hidden near the body to see that it was picked up as he received a second call after he had made one trip in response to a message from Sadowski and had failed to find the body.

Some man called me about 7:30 o'clock Wednesday morning and told me to go out and pick the body up," said Sadowski. "I got the name as Gallan. I told the caller I would have to notify the coroner's office and the police. I was told to notify Niles Center police. I did that and then went to a funeral."

The undertaker said he didn't know the body would be that of Nelson. He hadn't read the papers, he said. The jury concluded that "Lester Gillis, alias 'Baby Face' Nelson," came to his death in battle with Cowley and Hollis, "who died in the tradition of always getting their man." It expressed regret at the death of the federal men and instructed the coroner to write a letter of sympathy to their widows.

The name of Alvin Karpis, notorious kidnaper, was mentioned as that of Nelson's accomplice in the shooting, but police were inclined to favor the theory that it was Hamilton or some new Nelson ally.

TINY BABE

Stevenson, Wash., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Jacqueline Jackson outdoes the one-pound baby—by one month.

Jacqueline, born 21 months prematurely last Saturday, weighed only 15 ounces.

Her dinner consists of a half dram of milk from an eye dropper, every two hours.

Jacqueline is 11½ inches long, has hands about the size of a grown person's thumb, and wide open blue eyes.

The infant is the fourth child of Mr. and Mrs. F. Jackson.

CAPTAIN ARRAIGNED

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—William F. Waarns, acting captain of the liner Morro Castle when it burned at sea with a loss of 134 lives, and Eben S. Abbott, chief engineer, were arraigned today on charges of negligence, misconduct and inattention to duty.

The officers were accused of responsibility for the loss of "more than 50 lives."

Was fixed at $2,500 each and a hearing set for Dec. 12.

WOMAN KILLED

Clinton, Ind., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Mrs. Bert L. Knox of Georgetown, Ill., was killed and her husband seriously injured when their automobile was struck by a Milwaukee railroad freight train near Dana yesterday. Knox was brought to the Vermilion county hospital here with a severe head injury. His son, 13, was unhurt.

JAPAN DEMANDS FULL EQUALITY IN ARMAMENTS

Proposes New Efforts To Reach Naval Agreement

By Harold P. Braman
Associated Press Foreign Staff
London, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Japan tonight proposed new efforts to reach an agreement on naval limitation, but insisted that agreement must give her full equality in naval armaments.

Tsunao Matsudaira, Japanese ambassador to London, told Norman H. Davis, United States ambassador-at-large, Tokyo was willing to try to reach an understanding on the basis of recent British compromise proposals. A ten-year treaty was envisaged in the British suggestions.

Matsudaira, however, said Japan would state its naval needs for the first five years on a unilateral basis in conformity with the general category limitations now existing under the Washington treaty.

This treaty, signed in 1922, Japan had already decided to denounce before the end of the year, and the conversations here were called in an effort to work out bases of another agreement to take its place.

Later, however, it was learned authoritatively that the Japanese not only stand as firmly as ever for abolishment of the present 5-5-3 ratio, but that they believed the outlook for compromise actually no better than before.

The naval treaty, under the British plan, would last ten years, split into two five-year periods. Each power would state its naval needs for the first five years on a unilateral basis in conformity with the general category limitations now existing under the Washington treaty.

This treaty, signed in 1922, Japan had already decided to denounce before the end of the year, and the conversations here were called in an effort to work out bases of another agreement to take its place.

MARY PICKFORD FIGHTS CHARGES OF EX-MANAGER

Judge Reserves His Decision On Her Petition

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Mary Pickford's attorneys went to court today to keep an allegedly scandalous charge out of a $250,000 breach of contract suit against "America's sweetheart."

The result was delayed, Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson reserving decision on the petition for an order to prohibit Edward Hemmer, who claims he was Miss Pickford's manager, advisor and protector for 13 years, from presenting sensational evidence in his suit.

Hemmer's latest amended bill of particulars, the issue at court today, related alleged events that preceded Miss Pickford's marriage to Douglas Fairbanks, while she still was the wife of Owen Moore.

Are Estranged
Fairbanks and the golden haired actress now are estranged.

Hemmer's bill portrayed the athletic Fairbanks in a characteristic movie role in 1919—leaping a fence in flight from a set near Hollywood with the manager purportedly pursuing him with a pistol.

The reason for this incident, Hemmer alleged, was a "tip" from the actress' mother that Fairbanks was on his way to the dressing room of Miss Pickford, then Mrs. Moore.

Only a short time previously, he claimed, he had pursued Fairbanks from the Lambs club.

During either 1919 or 1920, Hemmer also set forth Miss Pickford's mother, known as "Mrs. Pickford," asked him to try to persuade Moore "to refrain from giving Mary a divorce" or obtaining one until "the defendant should have had an opportunity to overcome her infatuation for Fairbanks."

Later, the petition contended, Mrs. Charlotte Smith, Miss Pickford's mother, asked Hemmer "to object to the payment of $150,000 by the defendant to Owen Moore, in order to obtain a divorce."

As a result of his intervention, Hemmer alleged, Mary's mother subsequently was ousted from the vice-presidency of United Artists' Corporation through Fairbanks.

At another point the amended bill alleged that Hemmer interviewed Marilyn Miller at the request of Mary's mother and dissuaded her from breaking off her engagement to the late Jack Pickford at a time when Pickford's war record was receiving unfavorable mention. Later Pickford, of course, was killed in action.

Double Slayer Quizzed on Crime

Still in a daze after confessing a double murder, Joseph Steinmetz, 22, Los Angeles divinity student, is shown here at right as he was questioned on the crime by Saul Price, New York assistant district attorney. Price holds the gun with which Steinmetz admits he slew his wife, formerly Ruth Armstrong, 17, Hollywood movie aspirant, and the Rev. Joseph Leonard, Lawrenceville, N. J., Roman Catholic priest, when Steinmetz found them together in the priest's room in a New York hotel.

MORRO CASTLE'S ACTING CAPTAIN IS ARRAIGNED

Chief Officer And Engineer Freed Under Bail

New York, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The acting captain and chief engineer of the ill-fated Morro Castle, which burned at sea with a loss of 134 lives, were arrested late today and arraigned immediately before a United States commissioner on charges of negligence, misconduct and inattention to duty.

William F. Waarns, the acting captain, and Eben S. Abbott, the chief engineer, were released in bail of $2,500 each to await a hearing Dec. 12 before commissioner Garrett W. Coiter.

Federal statutes covering the case which assistant district attorney W. F. H. Adams described as a "very serious crime," provide a maximum penalty of ten years imprisonment and a fine of $10,000.

The complaints against the ship's officers, filed by special Department of Justice agents, charged that as a result of their "misconduct, negligence and inattention" to duties, "the lives of upward of fifty persons were destroyed."

Grand jurors who investigated accusations of criminal negligence in the disaster deliberated during the afternoon in private, but no indictment was handed up. The grand jury, it was reported, will meet again Monday, when its three months' tenure expires.

The fact that this afternoon's sessions were unattended by legal advisors gave rise to the belief that the jurors voted on indictments.

Waarns and Abbott, who previously had been before the grand jury, were pacing the long corridor outside the jury room when a bailiff arrived to escort them to the commissioner's court for arraignment.

Both the officers with three others aboard the Morro Castle at the time of the holocaust, are on trial also before steamboat inspectors for possible revocation of their licenses.

They have denied any negligence. The complaint against Waarns, charged the acting captain "unlawfully and wilfully by misconduct, negligence and inattention to his duties did fail to take such steps as were necessary for the safeguard of upward of 200 passengers; and as a result of his misconduct, negligence and inattention to his duties the lives of upward of 50 persons were destroyed."

The complaint against Abbott charged that he "unlawfully and wilfully by misconduct, negligence and inattention to his duties, did fail to report to his station when he learned that fire had been reported on the Morro Castle, and as a result of his misconduct, negligence and inattention to his duties the lives of upward of fifty persons were destroyed."

The Morro Castle was swept by a mysterious fire off the Jersey Coast September 8, with Waarns on the bridge following the sudden death of her master, Capt. Robert R. Willmot.

MOFFET AND FDR CONFER ON HOUSING PLANS

Administrator Has Adopted A Broad Policy

By Francis M. Stephenson
Associated Press Staff Writer
Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today heard from James A. Moffet, housing administrator, an endorsement of the broad policy to go ahead with federal construction of homes for those unable to obtain private credit, and later told newspapermen not to look for anything final on either relief or housing plans before January 3—the date congress convenes.

It was another leisurely day for the president, here for his annual sojourn during Thanksgiving time. He conferred with Moffet and in the afternoon drove down to the foundation to hold his regular press conference in front of Georgia Hall.

Moffet, who clashed with Secretary Ickes last week when the secretary advanced a proposal for building for those unable to obtain private credit, said after talking with the president, "That's straightened out entirely."

"In providing for slum clearances, substandard homesteads and rural homesteads," said Moffet, "it isn't the intention to compete with private enterprise in its natural normal field of operation."

"England has done this. If the government doesn't do it, no one else will."

Incidentally, Moffet reported "encouraging progress" on his own program for modernization and repair of homes and said application blanks were exceeding expectations.

At the press conference, President Roosevelt was asked about a report from London of an offer for a lump sum debt settlement. With a smile he referred to the letters "S.C.S." which were interpreted to mean "Sewing Circle Story."

If there is anything doing on the part of the United States to make offers to the debtors there is no sign of it here.

Next payments are due December 15 and Mr. Roosevelt always has taken the position it is up to the debtors to pay or seek themselves new terms—and to do this individually.

FRANCE URGES PEACE ACTION FROM HITLER

Must Translate His Words Into Acts Laval Says

By Richard Massock
Associated Press Foreign Staff
Paris, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Pierre Laval today asked Adolf Hitler to translate his words of peace into acts.

Simultaneously Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Hitler's personal emissary, was reported seeking to prepare the way for joint action of French and German war veterans to lessen the French fear of Hitler.

Laval, outlining the nation's foreign policies before the chamber of deputies, said:

"Chancellor Hitler has announced his desire for peace. We ask him to translate into action his words."

At the same time, Laval told the deputies, France and Russia stand together to guarantee the peace of eastern Europe.

"Russia is fully in accord with us on the conception of a collective enterprise in which she shares the initiative with us," he said. "Franco-Soviet solidarity is expressing itself openly for the benefit of all and for the consolidation of the peace of eastern Europe."

Laval declared relations between France and Italy had improved greatly and said negotiations between the two were proceeding "satisfactorily."

He insisted, nevertheless, that the projected Franco-Italian understanding would be incomplete unless it assumed "all guarantees of closer relations between Italy and the little entente, especially Yugoslavia."

The foreign minister asserted France has no intention of engaging in separate negotiations with Germany.

Death Yields One Jealously Guarded Secret in Carlisle Babes-in-the-Woods Mystery

FEUD BREAKS IN FAMILY OF DEAD BABES IN WOODS

Elmo Noakes' Sisters Get Suspended Jail Sentences

By L. S. Kimball.
Associated Press Staff Writer.
Roselle, Calif., Nov. 30.—(AP)—A scorching feud broke out here tonight among relatives of the five persons lying dead in the baffling tragedy of the Pennsylvania woods.

Two sisters of Elmo Noakes, the man in the quintuple rendezvous with death, were given suspended jail sentences by a justice of the peace as the climax of an uproarious court session. They were arrested on peace disturbance warrants served out by Russell Pierce, a nephew of Noakes and a brother of Winifred Pierce, the 18-year-old girl in the tragedy.

Offers Clew.
In the midst of the family tangle R. U. Noakes, brother of Elmo, offered a possible clue to the motive behind the deaths.

"There has been trouble in the family for years," he said. "I guess that's why Elmo left home."

In the same breath the brother expressed doubt that Elmo slew his three children near Carlisle, Pa., and then drove to Duncansville, 100 miles away, to kill Miss Pierce, his niece and housekeeper, and himself.

"There was nothing between that girl (Miss Pierce) and Elmo," said R. U. Noakes.

"I lived for two months with him and he never raised a hand toward the children. I don't think he killed them. He loved them. He was as good to them as any man could be."

Russell Pierce charged his two sons, Mrs. Winnie Chaffin and Mrs. Kate Gibby, "abused and cursed" his mother when they called upon her presuming in an effort to obtain information on whether the body of the 18-year-old girl in the case was that of Winifred Pierce.

Almost in tears, Mrs. Gibby denied the charge of abusing Mrs. Pearl Pierce, mother of Russell and Winifred.

"All Winnie (Mrs. Chaffin) and I did," said Mrs. Gibby, "was to go to see Pearl last night because we wanted to find out about the identification and console her."

Enid (another daughter of Mrs. Pearl Pierce) came to the door and said she didn't think her mother wanted to see us.

"I said all we wanted to find out was about Winifred's foot, which was sort of odd, and we thought we could establish the identification."

"Then Enid said, 'Get out of here! Get out!'"

"Then I said 'Now I see where some of the trouble is coming from.' That was all. We left and didn't say another word."

Mrs. Chaffin screamed as Justice Don L. Bass announced the 90-day jail sentence. She collapsed and kicked the floor with her heels, shrieking loudly. The other sister, Mrs. Gibby, also screamed.

Judge Bass finally restored order and informed the two women the sentence would be suspended. He ordered them not to attempt to visit or speak to Mrs. Pierce during the 90 days of probation.

Friends said Mrs. Pearl Pierce had been in a state of exhaustion because of the tragedy and did not see Mrs. Gibby and Mrs. Chaffin, her sisters.

R. U. Noakes voiced the opinion Winifred left the Pierce home and accompanied Elmo on his mysterious flight from here Armistice Day because of trouble in her immediate family.

"There was trouble in the Pierce home," said the brother of Elmo. "Mrs. Pierce and her husband didn't get along sometimes. My brother made a home for Winifred. It was a pleasant there, and so when he left I suppose she felt she would be happier with him."

Neighbors farmers found Doerr's body in the barn after they extinguished the flames.

Washington, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City for their own account amounted to $576,000,000 during the week ended November 28, an increase of $4,000,000 for the week.

The loans for the week ended November 28, 1933 were $698,000,000.

The Green Report

The statement of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, that 440,000 more people are unemployed now than a year ago is most disquieting. It should be most disturbing to those who have insisted that recovery is well under way.

The most striking evidence of the truth of Mr. Green's statement is furnished by the mounting relief rolls and the increased burden of relief costs. Missouri reports an increase of 100,000, despite the fact that several thousand families have been dropped. Mr. Green estimates that 3,000,000 more people are on relief than there were at this time a year ago.

He also declares that there has been an increase in part time employment, which means that those who are working have had their incomes cut and have therefore suffered a decrease in buying power. It has been the purpose of the administration to raise buying power and thus bring about recovery. It would seem that somewhere along the line this purpose has been checked.

Those who know the resources of this nation and the initiative of its people still have faith that recovery will come. The fault lies not with the people, but with the plan. There must be better distribution of products and greater consumption. That people should be in want in a land of plenty, that only a very few of the people have all the economic goods they can use, that the struggle for existence should be so intense as to leave men with little heart or desire to enjoy themselves, these are conditions that should cause Americans to hang their heads in shame.

It is true that unemployment is increasing, if relief rolls and costs are mounting, if recovery has been halted, in spite of our program of magnificent spending, the freeborn American citizen has a right to stand on his hind leg and thunder "Why?" Heaven knows, the people are paying for recovery, and they are beginning to realize that they will have to pay more and more, not only for recovery schemes, but for increased losses.

If President Green has spoken the truth, the people have a right to know the reason for this lack of progress. If he has not, somebody with the facts and figures to refute his statement should speak at once.

One Thumb Print, $100,000

A block of 1,600 acres of Maryland was recently sold for $100,000. The estate was the territory that could be covered on a map by a thumb, and it was given to Henry Courcy in 1877 for services rendered the British colonies at the Congress of the Five Nations in Albany.

Courcy is said to have rolled his thumb over in making the boundary mark, which may or may not have been fair. Anyhow he got a good chunk of Maryland, which has increased in value with the years. At that time it was a wilderness.

That was a novel method of handing out land, of which there was an abundance. Land was one thing that existed in plenty and it was a convenient reward for all sorts of services to the state. The railroad companies were given land from the Mississippi river to the west coast, every other section on each side the right-of-way, which formed the basis of the early wealth and power of these corporations.

Homesteaders were given land if they would go out and develop a new country. The present state universities had their beginnings in grants of land. Town lots were given away in pioneer communities. The people did not possess many resources, but land was cheap and easy to get.

From the land the people have developed a great nation, wealthy and rich in everything man could desire. They have used the fertility of the soil and the minerals under the soil and in the rocks. They have pumped out the oil and mined the coal. They have taken the gold from the river beds and the silver from the mountains. Now the land is about all gone. Much of it has been wasted and has lost its fertility. The government is buying it back to be rehabilitated as forest preserves. We are beginning to compensate for the damage done our resources when we "gave the Indians the breeze and started cutting down the trees." Today there is not room on the map for a marking out a thumb-sized estate for any one person or family.

Turkey Hash

With the remains of the turkey almost picked clean and turkey hash no longer a dish to excite the salivary glands, we have begun to wonder just how this turkey business all got started. Contrary to the significance, turkeys did not originate in Turkey. They were not introduced into Europe until after they were found in America. It is generally believed the Pilgrims had wild turkey as part of the menu for their first Thanksgiving feast.

In those days the woods were full of wild turkeys; but the white man shot most of them. Finally the various states got wise to the loss they were sustaining and made laws to protect the wild turkey. Today in some states the hunters are again shooting this magnificent bird, but according to strict regulation, the sport is better and the game is preserved.

But the domestic turkey gradually became popular. He is somewhat hard to raise, but he brings a special price on a special holiday market, and the profits are good. The turkey hen has a habit of hiding out her nest, which is a bit discouraging, as she cannot always protect her brood. The unmistakable call of young turkeys always sets the farmer to wondering whether he can raise all the turkeys he hears and have them ready for the Thanksgiving and Christmas markets.

Two Spotlighted Illinois Congressmen

From the Bloomington Pantagraph. When the new congress meets in January, two of the new members from Illinois will probably draw some curiosity and personal interest among members from other states. They are Leslie C. Arends of the 17th district and Scott W. Lucas of the twentieth district. Mr. Lucas will represent the district which sent Henry T. Rainey to congress for 20 years or more and saw him rise to the speakership of the house, a political position second only in potential influence to that of the President. Mr. Lucas, as occupant of the "shoes" of Speaker Rainey, will naturally be an object of personal and quizzical interest, for the veterans of the house will naturally compare him with Speaker Rainey. Younger by perhaps 20 years than Mr. Rainey, Mr. Lucas is no tyro in politics, and will not feel any special embarrassment except as attaches to the position of any first-termers. He has spent several years among the Democratic leaders of his home state and was one of the number of unsuccessful candidates for nomination for senator in 1932. He therefore can talk the language of the "game" and will probably go along with his party leadership in the house.

As to Mr. Arends of the 17th, he will enter the house not only among the younger of its members, but as a man occupying his first political position of influence. His election furnished a sensational political upset in the district's popular vote, the switch from 1932 to 1934 being about 8,000 votes in a year when the general trend was to follow 1932 leads. Because he is of the minority party, Mr. Arends will have but minor roles to play in the political alignments, but whatever situation confronts him he can undoubtedly be depended upon to act with the interests of his district at heart.

Both Mr. Arends and Mr. Lucas have held responsible American Legion offices, and they will swell the Legion representation in the new congress.

The New Deal in Washington

New Dealers Jolt Justice Department, So Hope Rises on Big Test Cases . . . C. O. P. Story in a Sigh, a Moan, And a Few Words . . . F. R. Puts Smart One Across in Roche Appointment.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Journal and Courier Washington Correspondent

Washington.—The New Deal's legal stars are more confident now about New Deal test cases before the supreme court.

That's because they've achieved at least a partial new deal at the Department of Justice.

For weeks the D. J. took one of the worst backstage pinnings ever handed a government department. Most of the emergency agency lawyers served as infantry men in the screened attack, but the hidden Big Bertha were certain supreme court justices who made their views known to the White House.

The targets included Attorney General Homer Cummings, Solicitor General J. Crawford Biggs, much of their staff, and the group of politicians and lobbyists commonly believed to be closely associated with the D. J.

Now, the New Deal attorneys demanded, could the government hope to win with old Mr. Biggs presenting its cases and the D. J. generally maintaining what seemed to them an attitude of non-co-operation?

So a compromise has been effected in the best Roosevelt manner. Demands of the more bitter critics that Cummings and Biggs be replaced are being ignored—for the present.

But Biggs won't be presenting any important New Deal test cases to the supreme bench. And Assistant Attorney General Angus McLean, nicknamed "Anguish" by others than his friends, won't be handling any supreme court cases at all.

The whole D. J. is working more closely with NRA, AAA, PWA, and other agencies and appointment of special Attorney General Stanley Arnold to handle NRA cases is accompanied by assurance that he will be primarily responsible to NRA.

Gold Cases First

First important supreme court test will be the gold cases, to be argued early in January. It was arranged so that the able General Counsel Stanley Reed of RFC could appear for the government and recently Attorney General Cummings let it be known that he, rather than Biggs, would also appear.

Some of Reed's friends have been pushing him for the solicitor generalship, but it is now more likely that he will be made a federal judge in Kentucky.

Shed a Tear for G.O.P.
Here's a new story going the rounds which doesn't come from the Republican National Committee:

F. R. Puts Smart One

The inside political significance of the appointment of Colorado's Miss Josephine Roche as an assistant secretary of the Treasury wasn't lost on the progressives here—who don't mind being cheered up a bit by the White House.

The president and Mrs. Roosevelt are both personally fond of Miss Roche, and like to have her around. Roosevelt also admires Senator Edward P. Costigan of Colorado, Josephine's close friend and political associate, who is the outstanding Democratic progressive in Congress.

Following Miss Roche's defeat in the gubernatorial primaries last September, political control of the state rested in the hands of Costigan's enemies and the senator's friends feared for his chances of renomination in 1936.

Clearly, Roosevelt wouldn't have considered naming two "little cabinet" members from the same city. (Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman, Costigan's 1930 campaign manager, is also from Denver.)

But Secretary Morgenthau's request for Miss Roche's services offered such a perfect chance to boost Costigan and his cause back home that Roosevelt could not resist it.

WILL ROGERS says:
To the Editor of The Journal-Courier:
Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 30.—Reading the list of guests at big wedding in London, Grand Duke Dimitri of Russia, Grand Duchess Xenia of Russia, Grand Duke Vladimir of Russia, Moscow will get a kick out of that. Then there was a big bunch of German ex-nobility. It was really a pre-war gathering, it was a very gracious thing of King George of England to dig up all these old "has-beens" and let 'em live over again past glories, even if it was just for a day. Not a Stalin, a Hitler, or a Mussolini to mar the proceedings.

TRUSTEE SPEAKS AT MAC MURRAY CHAPEL

A. C. Crawford, one of the trustees of MacMurray, spoke in chapel Friday. He emphasized many facts that should be remembered: "To be considerate; to be appreciative; and to be thankful." The popular girl, he said, is the considerate girl. The speaker offered the following motto as a good thought for life: "Do the best you can where you are with what you have today."

Jerseyville Legion to Buy Fairgrounds

Jerseyville.—Announcement has been made that Worthey Post, American Legion of Jersey county has obtained a sixty day option on the fair grounds located north of Jerseyville, with the intention of buying the property and converting it into an American Legion park.

Representatives of the Legion have been negotiating with the Kirby heirs, the present owners of the property, and have made arrangements to buy fifty-seven acres of land. An agreement has also been reached with the underwriters of the Grandstand association that they will give all their right, title and interest in the grandstand on the fairgrounds to the American Legion.

With the purchase of the land, it will become necessary to form an association within the American Legion organization, and the trustees of this will probably consist of a group of five men who have been instrumental in promoting the plans. They are William F. Hanly, R. Leo Smith, E. M. Porter, C. T. Kibler and Fred Jackson, Jr.

The problem of financing the project was discussed at a meeting of the workers this week but details have not been completed.

There will be no interruption in the annual Jersey County fairs that are held at this site each September. Arrangements will be made with the Legion and the association to conduct the exhibitions as usual.

Obituary

Gladys Adeline Hinegardner, wife of Russell Hinegardner and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jess Hicks of Jacksonville, Ill., was born July 10, 1908 at Murrayville, Ill.

On March 28, 1930, she was united in marriage with Russell Hinegardner at Wood River, Ill. To this union three children were born, Delbert Lee, age 3 years, James Milton, a babe of 1 year, and Russell Junior, who died in infancy. Also surviving are two stepchildren, Betty Inogene and Paul Edward and husband, all of Roodhouse. Her parents and three brothers, Kenneth, Harley, Dean, and one sister, Reta Hicks, all of Jacksonville, Ill. She also left a host of other relatives, friends and neighbors. She was a big hearted woman always ready to lend a helping hand.

After a short sojourn of only twenty-six years four months and sixteen days among earthly friends her soul broke the bonds that bound it to its tenement of clay and set out on its journey back to the God who gave it, at 9:15 Monday morning, Nov. 26, 1934.

She loved her husband and her children and gave herself in consecration to their welfare and comfort.

About eight months ago she contracted a severe case of influenza and later was operated upon for empyema following pneumonia from which she never fully recovered. And despite the best efforts of kind and loving hands the disease could not be checked.

Though suffering intensely she was hopeful and cheerful to the last. I cannot say and I will not say. That she is dead—she is just away! With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand.

She has wandered into an unknown land.

And left us dreaming how very fair it needs must be since she lingers there.

And you—O you, who the wildest yearn

For the old time step and the glad return

Think of her faring on as dear

In the love of There as the love of Here.

Mild and gentle she was and brave

To simple things; where the violets grew

Blue as the eyes they were likened to.

The touches of her hands have strayed

As reverently as her lips have prayed.

MICE MOVING IN: OLD ERADICATORS WILL STILL WORK

Urbana, Ill.—This is moving time for mice. They are now swarming back into houses, barns and other buildings to collect their share of the $200,000,000 toll of damage which mice and rats cause annually in this country, according to G. C. Oederkirk, rodent specialist of the U. S. Biological survey.

Fortunately, householders don't have to wait for some new scheme of exterminating these pests, he said. The old reliable method of using traps and poisoned bait will do it.

Like so many city dwellers who go to the lakes and resorts for the summer, mice and rats depart for open places in gardens and fields in warm weather and return to inside quarters when it becomes cold. Thus for the next month or so, house mice will be a nuisance and cause considerable damage to stored food and clothing.

If used in a thorough way, common spring traps or poisoned rolled oats furnish two of the best means of destroying these pests, explains Oederkirk, who is cooperating with the State Natural History Survey and the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, in the control of rodents in this state.

Pieces of fresh fried bacon tied to the triggers of snap traps or a smear of a mixture of rolled oats and peanut butter as bait will attract the mice. The principal need is to use plenty of traps. A dozen or more properly set along walls should eliminate the mice from the house in one or two nights, it is said.

Where poisoned bait can be used safely, one-eighth ounce of powdered strychnine may be stirred thoroughly into one quart of dry rolled oats. Pinches of this poisoned rolled oat bait placed at intervals along walls or put in small flat containers where mice will easily find them will give effective control. Caution should be observed, however, for the bait is equally poisonous to children or animal pets.

Death of William Eskew Accidental, is Jury's Verdict

William Eskew, 37, who died at Passavant hospital at 4:45 o'clock Thursday afternoon, came to his death from shock and concussion of the brain due to accidentally running into a truck driven by James Bond at the school for the Deaf about 8 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 29.

"We the jury exonerate the driver of the truck from all blame." This was the verdict of the jury returned Thursday morning at an inquest conducted at the Reynolds Mortuary by Coroner E. O. Sample.

The body of Mr. Eskew was returned to his home in Benton Friday afternoon where funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon from the residence of G. C. Cantrell, with interment in the Odd Fellows' cemetery at Benton.

The first witness at the inquest was James Bond, 933 West Lafayette avenue, driver of the truck. He said he was collecting garbage with his truck and was driving north between the ice house and the bakery at the school. As the truck emerged from between the buildings, Bond saw a man apparently running toward the machine toward the west. He applied the brakes, but felt something strike the truck back of the cab. He stopped the machine and found Eskew lying on the ground beside the truck. He had struck the bed of the truck on the corner just back of the cab.

He saw Eskew lying beside the truck with Bond standing near him. He went back to the boiler house and called the nurse at the school hospital. He then waited with Bond until Eskew was carried away on a stretcher.

Moore Stelle, a student employed at the school stated that he was making his rounds delivering ice to the kitchens. He had seen Bond previously and talked to him. As he returned from delivering ice, he noticed a crowd about the truck and saw a pool of blood and blood and hair on a bolt on the truck body. He said Eskew had a habit of running from one building to another when he went from the dining room to his room above the bakery. Stelle also said Eskew's eyesight was poor and that he had difficulty in seeing without his glasses. Stelle went to the hospital to see Eskew. He said he noticed his glasses and that they were bent.

Thomas Cline, who said he was in the dining room working when the accident occurred, testified that he saw Eskew lying beside the truck his feet about six inches from the rear wheel and his body parallel with the truck. He later saw the blood and hair on the bolt, where Eskew's head evidently struck the machine.

Dr. Drennan Testifies

Dr. George L. Drennan said that he was called to the school hospital to see Eskew about 8:15. The injured man had been put to bed. He was semi-conscious and able to make the sign of pain, but not able to understand signs made to him. He had a triangular wound in his forehead above street.

Capacity Audience Sees College Play

The presentation of the modern religious drama, "The Devil Passes," by Benn W. Levy, Thanksgiving night was the first production for this year of the MacMurray College Dramatic club. A cast of nine players, under the direction of Mrs. Marion Chase Schaeffer and Miss Dorothy Remley, of the Speech Department, made this play one of the most outstanding productions given by amateur groups in the city.

The play opened in the form of a prologue in which the audience was introduced to D. C. Magnus, a middle-aged English school teacher, well portrayed by Meredith Storr and Paul Robinson, a beautiful English girl, skillfully interpreted by Helen Wright. The evening's conversation leads to a deeper relationship between the two.

The rest of the play takes place several months later; the scene, the cottage of D. C. Magnus in the country. Though dressed as a minister, the Reverend Nicolas Tacy, brilliantly played by Rosalind Boland, is the Devil of the title. At a dinner party he suggests a game of truth in which each guest tells what he most wants in life. The painter, Louise Kisch, played by Olive Young, wishes to paint beautiful pictures. His wife, the actress—a part Susanne Schaeffer played with intelligence—deserves applause.

The unsuccessful author—Cosmo Klein, played by Jane Green, wants success. D. C. Magnus, played by Meredith Storr, declares for comfort, while his mistress, Paul Robinson, wants a perfect love above all else. The Reverend Herbert Messier, a saintly figure interpreted by Thyrus Smith, declares his ambition to rise until he arch-bishop of the worship of a malevolent God. His wife, well played by Leone Milward, characteristically announced she wants to do her duty.

To each the Devil offers what he desires but only so that he can get it through hurting others. Each, finally, refuses and the Devil's work of proving the omnipotence of God is carried on.

The minor character of the maid was adequately played by Yvonne Best.

The following students helped make the play a brilliant success:

Stage manager, Myra White, stage crew, Thyrus Smith, Carol Whitman, Helen Croxall, Katherine Gourley, Mabel Striegel.

Faint crew: Members of Speech 67, 53, 71 classes.

Light crew: Olive Young, Helen Croxall.

Property crew: Evelyn Goker, Mary Dalley, Yvonne Best, Phyllis Patchen, Clara Chapin and Elizabeth King.

The officers of the club include Rosalind Boland, president; Catherine Keeling, secretary; Helen Croxall, treasurer; Lois Williams and Sue Schaeffer, wardrobe mistresses.

The presence of the capacity audience in attendance shows the growing recognition of the excellent work of the college students and the contribution they are making to the city.

The wound in the forehead was in the form of a triangle, each side about an inch and a half long. The gash in the forehead was about five inches long. Both wounds exposed the skull bone. Dr. Black testified that it was possible to examine the bone closely and that no fracture was found.

Both physicians testified that Eskew came to his death from shock and concussion of the brain.

William Eskew was 37 years of age. He had been employed at the School for the Deaf about two months. He is survived by a sister, Miss Helen V. Eskew, a graduate of the Illinois School for the Blind and now a stenographer in Kankakee, and one brother, James M. Eskew of Benton, who was here Friday to arrange for removal of the body to Benton and to attend the inquest.

80,000 Persons Will Witness Football Game Between Army And Navy on Franklin Field

By Edward J. Neil
Associated Press Sports Writer
Philadelphia, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The military splendor of the Army and the Navy swept in on Philadelphia today, taking over the scene of the annual service football battle tomorrow, jamming the streets with traffic, exciting the populace, controlling everything in the city, in fact, except the weather.

On Franklin field, and everywhere else, drummed a steady rain for gloomy skies, and the best the weatherman could promise the tons of gold braid here assembled was that the showers would lessen by game time, 1:30 p. m.

The rain dampened everything but enthusiasm, high as it has ever been in the 44 years of sporting warfare in the annual service football battle tomorrow, jamming the streets with traffic, exciting the populace, controlling everything in the city, in fact, except the weather.

By land, and those that come by sea. Since the Army and the Navy shrank at weather anyway, the rain interested the service men only in that it threatened to shackle a disarmament conference the chief offensive weapons of the two elevens—Navy's spectacular Fred "Buzz" Borries, one of the nation's greatest ball carriers, and Army's equally versatile "Texas" Jack Buckner, main eye-catchers for the crowd of roughly 80,000 that will jam every available inch of space in Franklin field.

While Navy ruled an 8 to 5 favorite among the professionals, and no better than even money among those who have seen these two shatter pregame forecasts year after year in the past, Army was conceded the better chance in wet going, despite it being the natural element of the midshipmen.

Army has the heavier line, averaging 187-2-7 pounds to Navy's 175-5-7. The Cadets bulk 180-11 pounds per man as a team, Navy 174.

The Salton's attack admittedly is built around Borries, who does everything but the kicking that falls to Bill Clark. In Captain Joe Stanek, at fullback, Ed Grove at one half and Ralph King, at quarter, the Cadets are conceded a more versatile supporting cast that Borries has in his ball carrying assistants, Clark at fullback, Dick Pratt at quarter and Tom King, son of a former Navy Captain, at right half.

Not since 1921, when the sailors beat Army 7 to 0 in New York, has Navy won the service championship. In the ten games played since then Army has won eight games, and two have been ties. Navy held the Cadets to a scoreless tie in New York in 1932, and battled to a thrilling 21-21 deadlock in Chicago in 1926. Over the years Army had won 19 out of these season climaxes, Navy 12, with three ties. They did not meet in 1928 and 1929.

There were admirals enough to man the world's fleets, generals enough to take over a new war, gathered in their hotels with their parties, arguing and explaining plays like piebald and yearlings again, as the football squads took their final workouts as far apart as possible today.

The list of high officials included Secretary of Navy Swanson and Secretary of War Dem. chief of staff general D. J. MacArthur, postmaster general James A. Farley, congressmen and senators by the score.

The regiment of midshipmen from Annapolis and the corps of Cadets for West Point are not due here until just before time for their traditional marching before game time. The teams arrived last night and were quartered on opposite sides of the city. Today the Army squad walked around Franklin field, which has been covered with tarpaulins, then worked out in an armory for almost two hours, while Navy, true to tradition, sailed about in the wet of the temple stadium for a couple of hours.

Both elevens have been beaten Army by Illinois and Notre Dame, Navy by Pittsburgh's crushing power-house.

There was little hope that last minute arrivals could find room on the Franklin field premises. The 78,072 seats in the big horseshoe stand were sold weeks ago. Officials estimate that 70,000 more could have been sold.

Ticket speculators were believed to have no more than 200 tickets all told, and these were bringing fabulous prices. The top quotation was $70 for a choice seat, before rain brought the prices down.

Some Fatherly Advice

"Like father, like son," is true in the case of the Patrick family of hockey fame. Here is Les Patrick, silver-haired leader of the New York Rangers, giving some pointers to his son, Lynn, who is playing for his father's National League hockey team. Lynn is the only son of a former hockey great playing in major leagues.

Goodbye football. Hello basketball.

The transition period this year is even more rapid than in the past. Illinois College wound up its football campaign Thursday and tonight opens its basketball schedule, and with a conference opponent at that.

Next Tuesday J. H. S. launches its basketball program, and by Friday night all of the local teams with the exception of the I. S. D. Illini will be throwing the ball for baskets in inter-city contests.

Illinois is starting the season with brand new equipment. New durable shirts, white for home games and blue for games away from home, with blue trunks made from shiny jersey satin, and new shoes for games completed the playing equipment. New blue sweat clothes, with a big Illinois College on the back, complete the game equipment.

And after the game the uniforms and sweat clothes will be stored in two new large suitcases, purchased especially for carrying the togs about.

No longer will Louis Laster's shirt tail fly around in the air. Laster found a shirt in the new equipment long enough to meet the trunks and stay tucked in with a reasonable degree of security. The six foot ten inch center has suffered untold agonies with his shirt tail in the past.

Here's the final standing for the city football teams this year:

Team	Won	Lost	Ties	Pts.	Opp.
I. S. D. Illini	3	0	0	100	78 6
Roulet	5	1	1	83	118 7
J. H. S.	4	3	1	57	114 143
I. S. D. Tigers	4	0	0	500	105 80

Not bad for a season as filled with upsets as this past one has been. Five teams playing and everyone of them finished either with half of their games won or better.

Illinois School for the Deaf came through against the Missouri Deaf Turkey Day to make this record possible. The Tigers scrambled around in the mud, piled up 16 first downs while holding their opponents without a single ten yard advance, and then barely won by a 7-6 count.

The Tigers were invited to a big turkey dinner at the Missouri school after the game, stayed to the homecoming dance and then got back home about 3:30 Friday morning. Coach S. Robey Burns said the return trip was made through rain.

Burns forecast that the Tigers would win about two games this year and lose six. He is quite proud that his boys came through with four wins.

Coach Lewis Omer, Carthage coach, was considerably disappointed with his football team until the Turkey day game here. Then he changed his mind. With two of his regulars out of the line-up because of injuries, the coach declared the team played its best game of the season.

That became evident to us along about the second quarter. Carthage started slowly, but once they got the feel of things, they played like a real football team. The Carthage club was one that didn't find its full strength until the last game of the year.

Illinois College football players were the guests of the administration at a turkey dinner at Baxter hall following their victory over Carthage.

Coach Ray Nussipke was called upon by Charles Dunkley, Associated

GIANTS, BEARS WILL MEET IN BATTLE FOR PRO GRIDIRON TITLE

Chicago.—(AP)—Chicago's Bears will shoot for a third consecutive National Professional Football League championship a week from Sunday, against the New York Giants, a team they have defeated twice this season.

The same teams met in the playoffs last year in Chicago, with the Bears staging one of their famous last-period finishes to win, 23 to 21. This year's final battle will be played in New York at the Polo grounds.

The Bears found the Detroit Lions almost too much to handle yesterday at Detroit, but squeezed out a 19 to 16 victory to clinch the western division leadership. New York, minus its star field general and passer, Harry Newman, trounced Brooklyn, 27 to 0, to win the eastern section honors.

A pair of touchdowns by Ace Gustowsky and a field goal by Glen Presnell gave the Lions a 16 to 7 lead over the Bears after two periods. Jack Manders' famous toe, however, was good for field goals from the 21 and 42 yard lines in the third frame, and in the fourth, Joe Zeller, former Indiana star, intercepted a pass from Gustowsky and ran it to the four-yard line. Two plunges failed to get much, but taking a lunge into the line, Bruno Nagurski lobbed a short pass to Bill Hewitt for the winning touchdown. Keith Molesworth tossed to Gene Ronzani for the first Bear score.

The Giants pushed Brooklyn all over the place in qualifying for the playoff. Dale Burnett scored two touchdowns and Ray Flaherty and Kink Richards contributed one apiece.

The Chicago Cardinals finished their season with a 6 to 6 victory over the Green Bay Packers. The Cardinals score was accomplished in a hurry. Homer Griffith running the initial kickoff back 90 yards for a touchdown.

Before meeting in the playoff, both Bears and Giants will finish their regular seasons Sunday. The Bears meet the Lions at Wrigley field, while New York polishes off on Philadelphia. Green Bay plays at St. Louis, and Brooklyn goes to Boston for the other two games of the day.

TRAPPERS CAN SET SNARES TODAY
Fur-bearing Animals Stood Drought Well

The annual harvest of pelts from fur-bearing animals that roam the timber and fields in Morgan county will begin today. December 1 brings in the trapping season which extends over a period of 2 months, closing February 1.

Morgan county is in the Central Zone as designated by the State Department of Conservation and has eight seasons are somewhat different than those in the north and south sections of the state.

Raccoon, opossum, mink, muskrat, skunk and fox are included in the list of fur-bearers that may be taken beginning Saturday. Trapping requires a special license and five of these have been issued at the office of County Clerk Brockhouse. The number of trappers appears to grow smaller each year, probably because of the scarcity of varmints.

Reports from a number of hunters, however, indicate that the fur-bearers are more numerous this year than for several years. While drought conditions cut down the supply of quail and rabbits, the fur-bearers came through and increased in numbers.

Fur markets this year are about the same as in 1933. There may be some rise as the season progresses.

line-up.

The Pioneers will be in excellent shape for the game, football having been discarded as an intercollegiate sport at Shurtleff this year, and all of the time thus far in the college year has been spent on basketball.

Springfield Junior college, boasting an excellent team this year, had a terrific battle on their hands last week on their home court but finally subdued the Alton collegians 37-35.

Herbert Fisher, graduate of LaPorte, Wis., Teachers college, the same institution that gave Mark Terman, Springfield high coach to Illinois basketball, is serving his first year as coach of the Pioneers. He has several veterans available from last year's squad.

Naming over his prospects yesterday, Coach Van Meter said that he might give Ray Smith and Nick Watte, two members of the football squad which closed its season against Carthage Thursday, a chance to throw a few baskets for the Blueboys. Smith led the champion intra-mural cagers last year, and Watte was a member of the team last year.

Likely freshmen prospects will get a chance to show their stuff against the Peoria Y quintet, a seasoned organization which has been playing together for more than a year. Either ran, Lawrence Bundy, Cliff Amidei and John Taylor, members of last year's squad, William Bundy and McCollum, freshmen, are making determined bids for places on the starting line-up.

Otherwise the Blueboys will start the season with the two leading conference scorers, Louis "Tootall" Lastier and "Slim Jim" Winn, with North Miller, sophomore this year from White Hall, and John Bunch, former J. H. S. player. Those were the five boys Athletic Director LaRue Van Meter picked out yesterday as the probable starters.

None of the positions are clinched, the basketball coach went on to declare for several threats to positions have cropped up this year. Al Cochran, Lawrence Bundy, Cliff Amidei and John Taylor, members of last year's squad, William Bundy and McCollum, freshmen, are making determined bids for places on the starting line-up.

"BEACH BEAUTY" by ARTHUR SHUMWAY

SYNOPSIS

After Earl Harrow, theatrical producer, attends a Community Players' amateur show and sees Kay Owen, the star and local beauty, he decides to prolong his visit to Daytona Beach. He offers her a job as his typist during his stay. Kay, feeling that this may give her an opportunity to get on the professional stage, is thrilled. Following a party at Ida Campbell's, socialite member of the Players, Ida and Harrow become interested in each other to Kay's disappointment. Citing the producer's reputation, Kay's mother and brother, Bud, urge her not to work for him. Then Bud is taken ill. Kay accepts Harrow's offer to help her family. Pete Ryan, young engineering student working as a life-guard, is in love with Kay. He receives an offer of an engineering job in Guatemala and asks Kay to marry him. Kay, uncertain of her love for Pete, refuses. Harrow secretly aboard the luxury yacht, "Commander III," Pete calls at her home to say "good-bye," before he leaves for Guatemala, but Kay is at work.

CHAPTER XVI

Saturday Kay received her first letter from Pete. He wrote: "Dear Kay--I'm in New Orleans waiting to go down to Puerto Rico next week to report for duty. There's a little red-tape and preparation here in the meantime. I can't say I regret the way things have turned out. The only thing is to work hard and try to get some where, and to save my money so I can go back to school. I won't be the hard sledding it was last time. "The hard part was having to leave you. Guess we'll just have to consider that last night on the Kayo our goodbye date. I'll never forget that, Kay, never."

"The thing to do is let things work themselves out, I guess, and I'll really be glad to pitch into good hard work for a pen and I wish you'd let me hear from you as often as you feel it's worth the trouble."

"I'm hoping that you won't get yourself into anything with that Harrow bunch and that your family affairs will come out all right. Then, maybe, when things are different, you'll be able to listen to me better when I talk to you about marriage."

"There's no use denying it, there isn't anything in this whole world I want more than you. In Guatemala, here in New Orleans, in Daytona, up north in New York or Chicago, or for that matter in Hong Kong, all I'll ever want will be you and we'd be enough for each other in any of those places if you felt about me the way I do about you. My real hope is that maybe you will someday."

"I'm staying in the Monteleone Hotel in the French Quarter and when I'm not busy at the company's office, I'm wandering around seeing this old town. It's wonderful, Kay, and just the sort of thing I think you'd like. When I walk down Royal Street past the cafes, and the old houses and wandering around in the hidden patios, I imagine you're with me and we're talking about it. It sounds dirty, but I get a great kick out of it."

"I think I'm supposed to get out of here within a week, and I'll keep in touch with you as much as I can. Just remember that I'm the guy who loves you so much he can't think straight."

"Yours, always, "PETE."

Sitting on the back veranda, reading the letter, Kay felt the tears coming to her eyes. When she had finished, she put the letter on the table beside her chair and looked out over the lawn and across the shining river toward the mainland. Everything was misty and remote.

That week-end she remained away from the yacht. To occupy her mind and pass the time as smoothly as possible in her bewilderment, she took her mother out in the Kayo. They rode slowly down the river, and for bait a piece of spoiled meat on the end of a fishline. It was a long Sunday, nevertheless, and, somehow a blue one.

When they returned they visited the hospital and spent the afternoon with Bud, went home and ate and again went to the hospital. Everywhere Kay went, there seemed to be trouble, perplexity and a strange emotional ache that defied definition but managed to make her unhappy.

She was glad when it was Monday and she had an excuse to return in the morning to the Commander III. But she was disturbed by what Harrow told her. "The time is drawing on," he announced, "and from what I hear from New York, I won't be able to spend much more time here. I had wanted to go on down the coast and maybe over to Havana, so if I'm going to do it I'll have to start soon."

"I see," Kay said. Harrow was studying her quizzically. He remarked gently, "Of course, you know, Kay, there's nothing I'd rather do than take you along on the cruise. If it just weren't for your family's objection..."

Kay smiled ruefully. "I'd love to go," she said, "but I don't know how it would ever be possible. At any rate, I've certainly enjoyed working for you and you've been awfully kind to me. Maybe I will be able to get up to New York some day and then I'll hold you to your promise to help me find my way around in show business."

Harrow nodded. "I wish you could come along," he said. "I'll need somebody more than ever to look after my correspondence and one thing and another. It would be a perfectly legitimate job, I assure you; but, of course, you know what's best at home."

That night out at the hospital she was looking a little better and seemed to be improving even more rapidly than the doctor had expected.

"I was just thinking," he said dreamily. "What about Bud?"

"About old Pete," Kay said. "What about him?"

"There was a swell old boy," Kay said. "No argument there. He's as nice as I have ever known."

"You know, you get funny ideas, living around alone the way I've been doing out here," Bud continued. "You take time to think of things. You get to running through my mind. You know, I always sort of thought you'd marry him some day. I kind of hoped you would, in fact."

"You can't tell," Kay conceded quickly.

Bud shook his head. "You're gone on that Harrow," he said. "Don't be silly!"

Kay was surprised how angry the accusation had made her.

But Bud shook his head again. "I don't have to be told in words of one syllable," he said. "Pete knew, too. He told me."

Kay looked curiously at her brother. "Pete told you? Told you what?" There wasn't anything to tell.

"Sure there was--nothing concrete, but plenty nevertheless. And old Pete knew. How do you suppose I got all the low-down on Harrow?"

So that was it? Pete! Kay's angry resentment made a hard knot in her throat.

Next morning, aboard the yacht, Kay reflected on what Bud had told her about Pete. Honest, blundering old Pete, he had poisoned her family against Earl Harrow in his boyish jealousy and it was he then who was responsible for her present odious position, for her having to sneak back and forth and make excuses to her mother in order to hold a job that would help them in their way out of trouble. Kay didn't know whether she hated Pete for his interference. She didn't see how she could. But she did know that she was tremendously angry with him and she resolved not to answer his letters and to forget him if possible.

He had behaved with such foolish, blind jealousy once, what might he do the next time?

So now, she regretted all the more not being able to remain with Harrow for the cruise. Imagine it! Being paid to travel on a boat like the Commander with such a man as Harrow to the cities of the lower east coast and probably over to Havana! And the fact that she couldn't go--that, too, was Pete's fault. It all went back to Pete, whom a week or two ago she had considered marrying.

To make it worse, she met Ida Campbell on the yacht that afternoon and Ida said, "Earl tells me you won't be able to make the cruise with us?"

"No, I'm sorry, I won't be able to go," Kay admitted.

"That's a shame, Kay. I was counting on you. We'd have had such a good time together. Personally, I've just been stargazing lately and it'll be just what I need."

That's right, Kay thought, rub it in. Nor was that the end of Kay's trouble that day. When she got home her mother greeted her with a look that meant a solemn discussion was coming.

"What's the matter, mother?" "I hear you're spending all your time on that yacht."

Mrs. Owen seemed sterner than she usually was when annoyed by something Kay had done. Kay drew a deep breath and decided that the time had come.

"I'm there every morning and afternoon, yes."

Her mother's expression of reproach was painful to her.

"But I told you, mother--you didn't understand."

"You told me nothing of the sort. Now, Kay, I'm not going to try to live your life for you, but I thought we went into all this once before and you said you would have no more to do with those people. It's the deception that hurts me, Kay."

"No, no, you still don't understand. I told you it was strictly business. Mr. Harrow offered me a job and when I wanted to take it you said no, and I agreed just to make you happy."

"Then when Bud was taken to the hospital I brought it up again and you seemed so set against it that I let it drop. But I had my mind pretty well made up. It was just pride on your part, mother, and you know it. There was no reason why I shouldn't have taken it. After all, it was quite temporary and paid so well that it would have been absolutely foolish to have passed it up, needing money as we do. So you're right; I did deceive you; I took the job. I've been working at it and I've two checks in the bank in your account. And you're going to take that money and use it toward his expenses or I'll never, never even try to do the things you want as long as I live."

Kay took her mother by the shoulders and smiled at her reassuringly. "You know you don't have to worry about me, mother. And Mr. Harrow understands. I told him you objected and he was so nice about it and agreed and said he saw your point. You just don't know him, mother."

Mrs. Owen smiled, not too easily, Kay thought, and kissed her on the forehead. "All right, Kay," she said. "Do what you think is best. You say I don't have to worry about you. I hope not. See that I don't. Now then, let's have something to eat and get out and see Bud. Not a word about this to him, now."

"Of course not," Kay agreed. "He'll be out of the hospital in a day or two, and then he ought to go to the mountains," Mrs. Owen said. "I'm expecting a letter any day from Gertrude Bowen, your father's cousin, you know. She lives near Hendersonville, North Carolina, summers, and in the fall, and it might be that I could get her to let me take Bud up there for a while. She'll be going back to Memphis soon now and she may let me use her cottage for a while. I don't know how it can be managed, but it'll have to be."

Next morning Kay went aboard the yacht, smiling.

"You look especially cheerful this morning," was the greeting from Earl Harrow.

"I am."

"Good news?"

"Absolutely. I don't have to sneak back and forth any more. Mother knows I'm doing this work for you and we've had an understanding on it."

"I'm glad to hear it," Harrow said. "Do you know, since you told me, I've been examining my forehead every morning in the mirror; but, if you can believe it, I haven't found the first

To Speak Here

EARL C. SMITH
I. A. A. President.

Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association, will be the principal speaker at the annual Morgan County Farm Bureau meeting here Monday. Mr. Smith will make his address at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Mr. Smith operates a 1,140 acre grain and livestock farm in Pike county near the village of Detroit. He has served the Illinois Agricultural Association as president since 1928 during which time he has been prominent in the legislative work of organized agriculture both in Springfield and Washington.

He was especially active since 1926 in efforts to secure the enactment of farm surplus control legislation known as the McNary-Haugen bill. His outstanding leadership in agriculture has been recognized by President Hoover and President Roosevelt who have consulted him on numerous occasions regarding details of farm legislation.

It was largely due to his influence that corn and hogs were included with other commodities in price-raising legislation, first in the Rainey-Norbeck bill introduced in Congress during the last year of the Hoover administration, and later in the Agricultural Adjustment Act which was enacted into law early in 1933.

More recently he was elected chairman of the National Corn and Hog Committee which assisted the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in drawing up a definite program to control surplus and re-establish pre-war parity prices for these two commodities.

Similarly, in the state, the I. A. A. leader was named as the representative of agriculture on a number of state committees and conferences appointed by succeeding governors to advise on important matters of public policy.

Under the leadership of Mr. Smith the I. A. A. has fought for many years for a fair revenue amendment to the state constitution, and for legislation to reduce and replace at least part of the burdensome property tax which rests so heavily on farms, homes and other tangible property.

Born at Pittsfield, Illinois, in 1886, Mr. Smith began farming for himself in Pike county at the age of 19. He was a pioneer in the use of limestone and sweet clover for improving soil fertility. The Smith farm is chiefly devoted to livestock production, cattle and hog feeding predominating.

Mr. Smith became identified with the Farm Bureau movement in its formative period. He served first on the executive board of the Pike County Farm Bureau and later as vice-president and president.

He is an officer of the First National Bank of Pittsfield and has been active in his community in and about Detroit. Previous to being elected president of the I. A. A. in 1926 he served as a member of its executive committee for three years.

Mr. Smith was elected to the board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation three years ago and has served since then on the A. F. B. F. legislative committee.

Winchester, Nov. 30.—Monday will mark the beginning of a new administration in the offices of county clerk, county judge, sheriff and assessor and treasurer in Scott county. The newly elected county commissioner, James Landis, assumed the duties of his office upon the receipt of his commission from the governor shortly after his election. The county superintendent of schools, E. P. L. Blansett, will assume the duties of his office August 1st. Bert Willis having been re-elected to the office of county clerk will continue in his old stand with Herman Martin as his deputy.

L. Allan Watt will assume the duties as judge of the county court, replacing Judge T. J. Priest. In the offices of the sheriff, assessor and treasurer there is rather an unusual circumstance in that Harry C. Montgomery, now sheriff, exchanges offices with Harry E. Gidney, now assessor and treasurer, and each will succeed to the office of the other. Under the laws of the state it is impossible for either officer to succeed himself and they are merely making a trade. Maurice O'Brien of Bluffs has been appointed deputy sheriff by Mr. Gidney. The other two appointments, caretaker of the court house and keeper of the jail have not yet been made by Mr. Gidney. It is understood that the present officers will hold over for a short while.
